

Rosie Truelove

Director, Neighborhood Housing and Community Development
City of Austin

Rosie Truelove is currently the Director of the Neighborhood Housing and Community Development Department for the City of Austin.

Neighborhood Housing and Community Development (NHCD) is responsible for the development and incentivizing of affordable housing in Austin, as well as community development services to benefit eligible residents, so they can have access to livable neighborhoods and increase their opportunities for self-sufficiency. Rosie has been with NHCD for over a year.

Prior to that, Rosie served as the Capital Contracting Officer for seven years and worked in the capital project delivery arena for 14 years. The Capital Contracting Office has the delegated authority and responsibility for procurement and contracting services related to the City's Capital Improvement Program.

Rosie began her career at the City of Austin 19 years ago, working in the information technology department. From there, she moved to the City Manager's office where she served as an Executive Assistant to the Deputy City Manager and City Manager.

She has a Master in Public Affairs from the LBJ School at the University of Texas and undergraduate degree in Government.

Rosie is a founding member of Woman-to-Woman, an employee organization at the City of Austin and has served on numerous cross departmental groups at the city of Austin focused on technology governance and human resources. She serves as the President of the Board of Directors of the Blodgett Fellows in Urban Management – a non-profit formed to promote the profession of Local Government in graduate education.

Rosie is also active in her children's school in Southwest Austin where she lives with her husband and their two sons and dog, Kerbey.
